MISCELLANEOUS READING.

ICONNUNICATED. MY HOME IN THE SUNNY SOUTH.

There is a spot, I call it home,

Its skies are bright and its flowers are fair, And I love to think, where e'er I roam, That loving hearts are beating there, Longing for my return. There light-winged zephyrs play at eve, And gentle skill the lute strings move,

While softest voices music give; But still must I a wanderer rove, And silent yearn. Though it is long since I have seen, (For I have wandered many a year,) Its skies of blue—its changeless green,

I yet, in fancy, often hear That loving tone, Bidding me go, and not forget, In all the world I have a home. And well do I remember yet, Those gushing tears—that stifled moan, When all is hushed, and I'm alone.

Twas there my infant days were passed, There, boyhood's sunny dreams flew by But all too sweet, too bright to last, They bloomed, but as the flowers, to die!
Too soon, alas! Yet still my fancy loves to dwell,

Amid those scenes of other years, Ere yet I spoke that long farewell, Or shed those burning, blistering tears.
But let that pass! Oh! had I known what since I've felt! Home! ere I turned my back on thee, And thy dear treasures, I had knelt,

And prayed,—prayed, oh! how fervently To God!— In you old grave-yard's mossy shade, With blooming violets clustering by, My peace with Heaven forever made, That I in death might calmly lie, Beneath the sod!

Washington, January 30, 1859. [COMMUNICATED. To Miss M. P. C-, of Westmoreland, Virginia.

I met her in the crowded hall, Surrounded by the fair and gay-The spirit of love seemed breathed o'er all And merrily time passed away. I gazed on brows like the snow new made, And cheeks, like the morning's flush, Eyes by which the stars would fade,

And outvying the painter's brush. But one seemed lovelier than the rest, Like Luna mid the starry host, The purest, fairest, sweetest, best, The one to worship most! She glided by me in the dance, Like a sylph or a fairy queen, Her fleecy robe served to enhance,

The gracefulness of her mien. Thro the witching hours of midnight, I lingered by her side, And swifter than an eagle's flight The blissful moments died. By the dawning light we parted, But met ere the day was old, And the tiny hand ere I started, I clasped in a kindly fold. May life to her be a placid stream,

Tossed by no storm of sorrow, May it pass away like a beautiful dream, Into eternity's morrow! PAUL JONES IN THE FRITH .- Last week Mrs. Reekie, a widow, died at Pathhead, near Kirkcaldy. She was known to have been the last of those young lasses who lighted the fires in Ravenscraig Castle when the men of Pathhead kept armed watch and ward nightly for the return of Paul Jones. She jan 13 often referred to this period in her life, and N EW BOOKS.—Christ and the Inheritance of described minutely the appearance of Mr. Shirra, when engaged in praying on the beach ries from the Colossians, by Thomas Guthrie, D. for that wind which drove the vessels of the years single, 44 years married, and 28 years widow, and was in the habit of saying that
